LES PRINCES

Nara is a gypsy who has thrown his wife out of the house because a social worker talked her into using birth control pills. Now he lives with his 80-year-old mother and young daughter. They both provide a balance for Nara's violent behavior and illegal activities, despite the constant threat of eviction.

"Les Princes" is the debut movie of Tony Gatlif (Latcho Drom). The portrait of a Gypsy family living in the almost abandoned and decaying outskirts of Paris.

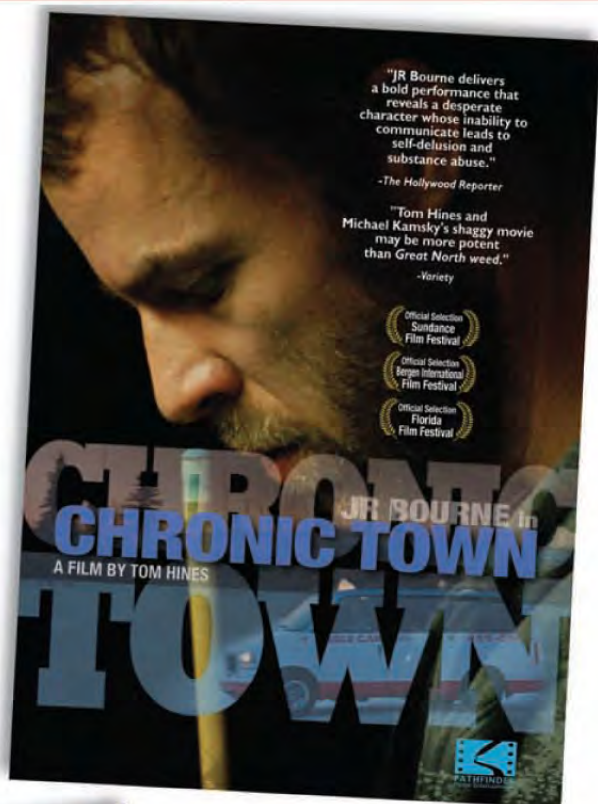

One of the most remarkable features of "Les Princes" is its use of carefully chosen locations to underline the squalid conditions Gypsies must live in. Urban landscapes, decaying housing developments, seedy bars, derelict factories, this is a version of Paris you've rarely seen on film.

Drama: 100 min

ADRIATIC SEA OF FIRE
(FLAMMES SUR L'ADRIATIQUE)

Two Yugoslavian patriots try to scuttle a seized warship from World War II, rather than let it fall into the hands of the Germans. They contemplate sailing to England to use the boat in the fight against the Nazi invaders. The captain is bound to follow orders, while a Nazi collaborator on board secretly plots to take over the vessel. When their alternative plans fail to materialize, the two friends vow they will take the ship apart one piece at a time, rather than give it up.

THE SNAKE

If "Clerks" and "Dangerous Liasons" had a bastard child, it would be "The Snake". Ken (Adam Goldstein) overcompensates for his insecurities by seducing women. Not a bad plan... if he could actually seduce any.

Sinking to a new low, Ken joins a support group to get into the skinny jeans of Talia (Nina Braddock). He intends to win her over by enabling her eating disorder, but first he must survive "partner time" with the other members – including a radical feminist and a vengeful divorcée. Can Ken maintain his sensitive charade, or will he be outed as The Snake?

This pitch black comedy, complete with an appearance by Margaret Cho, will make you cringe with laughter!

Drama: 80 min • English

SHARE THE MOON

For 20 years, Brent, Nick and Sue have been best friends. Now, they will face the truest test of their friendship... in Idaho. Sue left Idaho to pursue her dreams of becoming an actress in Hollywood, but Brent brought her back, in this stunning, unseen 90's indie gem that must be seen to be believed.

Shot on gorgeous 16mm, starring and directed by Gregory C. Haynes, "Share the Moon" is a dying breed of cinema, the kind of films that used to blow away film festival audiences on a regular basis. It is only a matter of time before "Share the Moon" becomes a cult favorite.

Drama: 90 min

PRETPARK NEDERLAND

"A Fun Fair behind the Dikes" In his trademark tongue-in-cheek style, director Michiel van Erp follows a Chinese tour bus' exploration into the daily distractions of people in the Netherlands. Focusing on the mechanics of the Dutch tourism industry and events from Gay Pride Amsterdam to an Elf Fantasy Fair, the film follows the organizers and key figures behind events and destinations. This includes the director of the Efteling theme park creating a new roller coaster, to a manager of an outlet store promoting his store with a chocolate bed. A look at how Dutch citizens spend their vacation and leisure time as seen through the eyes of Chinese tourists. There is nothing quite like this.

THE FAMILY THAT EATS SOIL

"The Family That Eats Soil" seeks to paint a dystopian portrait, a phantasmagoric reversal of Filipino values. It is an allegory for a people still walking and breathing under an unending nightmare.

A crisp, 75-minute hyper-condensed punk-trash take on Philippine family politics. At times it plays like a de-Pasolinized version of Takashi Miike's Visitor Q, at others like an absurdist experimental bomba flick. Yet it always feels as if cinema is about to end and only no-holds-barred videomaking can save the world. -Film Comment

Displays clear traces of furious improvisations and a nonchalant provocative manner.
-Rotterdam International Film Festival

A very violent & provocative film. Downright bizarre. Involves cockfighting, prostitution, midgets, skull-crushing and plots to kill babies. -Montreal Festival Of New Cinema

VAMPIRE OF QUEZON CITY

Gruesome and grisly murders are our entry point into the psyche of the Aswang of Quezon City. More a meditation on the workings of a disturbed mind than a detective thriller, it nonetheless shows us a cat and mouse mind game. We watch and squirm in terror as the Pinoy vampire strikes again and again.

UP COMING RELEASES

THE SNAKE

Ken (Adam Goldstein) will sleep with anything that moves, as long as that thing is female. Young, old, fat, thin, even bulimic. In fact, Ken joins a bulimic support group with the idea of getting into Talia's pants (Nina Braddock). Can Ken keep up with this charade or is this situation too much even for "The Snake"?

Even Margaret Cho eventually makes an appearance in this charcoal dark comedy.

SUNSETS

Dave and Mark are two buddies who've just graduated from high school. When their friend Gary is released from jail, the three spend most of the summer drinking and chasing girls. As fall approaches, the three don't realize that the days are numbered for their friendship.

HITLER MEETS CHRIST

Two men meet in a train station. One believes he's Hitler, the other, Christ. Pitted in a tireless debate, the defiant Hitler is incensed by his companion while Christ struggles to detect any trace of a human soul beneath Hitler's rock-solid layers of bile and hatred.

As the friction escalates, Hitler's rage becomes all-consuming and Christ is forced to test his own endurance in his search to answer the question: Just how far does God's love extend?

COMRADES IN DREAMS

"Comrades in Dreams" is a valentine to the cinema. Filmmaker Uli Gaulke embarks on a journey to celebrate the cinematic experience by exploring the most alternative, "independent" strain of cinema he can find.

Gaulke interweaves stories spanning continents... from a traveling Indian tent cinema to a North Korean "film club," a Wyoming woman's dedication to her local cinema group to an open-air cinema in Burkina Faso. He captures a sense of the humanity that the fundamental act of "cinema" evokes in each of his characters.

ELEVATOR MOVIE

Jim is a shy, withdrawn loner, pervert and virgin. Lana is a friendly and outgoing born again Christian who has renounced her promiscuous drug filled past. They have never met until they step into an elevator together one day. The elevator gets stuck between floors, and they start to get to know each other. A building maintenance man assures them over the elevator's emergency intercom that a repairman is on the way. Hours, days, weeks, and months pass, and no repairmen arrive. Jim and Lana spend their days screaming into the intercom trying to get the maintenance guy to answer again. He doesn't.

Starvation is not a problem, as Lana entered the elevator with a bag full of groceries, which is mysteriously found to be filled with fresh food every morning. After enough time passes, Jim gives up hope of escape and resigns himself to building a new life in the elevator with Lana, who he sees as his first girlfriend. Lana on the other hand desperately wants to escape, and clings to her faith in God to provide them with an opening of the elevator doors. Eventually, a reluctant and desperate romance begins--

Clearly inspired by early Lynch, Buñuel, Cronenberg, and even the recent work of James Fopopoulos. And if you know anything at all about any of these filmmakers you'll rightly conclude that Elevator Movie firmly belongs under that prickliest of classifications: Not For Everyone. -FILM THREAT

SUGAR

"An extremely unsettling vision of private terrors by filmmaking collaborators Reynold Reynolds, Patrick Jolley and Samara Golden. Plays like a fever nightmare of any New Yorker who's lived in a one-room living box. Pic is a triumph of lower-than-low budget filmmaking, with mainly one thesp (Golden in an outrageously demanding performance that indicates a commitment above and beyond the call of duty), one extremely messy room (with a spooky thick-glass window looking out onto a crowded Manhattan street) and a complex visual and aural design involving camerawork that appears to crawl under the skin and Bruce Odland's and Sam Auinger's stunning sound design."

HITLER'S JEWISH SOLDIERS

By Nazi law anyone who was 25% Jewish was a Jew. Remarkably, many of these partial Jews, or "Mischlinge" (the German word for "mutt") were proud Germans, with roots that went back hundreds of years. Many were drafted into the Nazi army. This fascinating documentary examines the life of four men who faced this paradox. "Hitler's Jewish Soldiers" tells an engrossing story of madness and vicious absurdity; a study into the systematic mind of Hitler's personal chaos.
