Synopsis

In The Colette's Heroines Collection, her women are brought to vivid life through the passion, creativity and desires of these wonderful films. You too can see why Colette's beloved characters have so profoundly influenced French culture. Explore France's most secret, lusty tales, with these four classic stories.

"Julie de Carneilhan" was written in the same period as the classic "Gigi," starring Audrey Hepburn, but proves no less titillating.

Julie (Caroline Cellier) lives alone after her divorce from Herbert d'Espivant (Jean-Louis Trintignant), an intriguing man whom she still loves. Worse, Herbert has married again, his new blushing bride is a wealthy woman with connections in the world of politics. Desperate to win him back, Julie is faced with a difficult decision when the greedy Herbert asks her to help him steal a small fortune from his new wife.
